

Welcomes AMY REYNOLDS as New Executive Director

With the announcement of Diane McWithey's retirement last October, the board of directors conducted a nationwide search with the assistance of Page Two Partners, for the next Executive Director.

The search took place over seven months, involved input from a wide range of participants, and included multiple rounds of interviews. The search is now over, and we are pleased to announce that Amy Reynolds will be Share's next Executive Director. She'll officially begin this new role on Monday, July 17.

Share is going through a truly unprecedented organizational change and I couldn't be prouder of the work of our search committee, board directors, program managers and stakeholders who participated in this extensive search process. In selecting Amy as our Executive Director, we get an experienced leader with an immense passion for fulfilling Share's mission, and we are excited for what lies ahead.

Amy brings with her 22 years of dedicated service at Share. She began as a swing-shift case manager at Share Orchards Inn, moving up to Director of Share Orchards Inn and the Winter Hospitality Overflow program, then to Director of Programs and then to her current role as Deputy Director.

From her case management role to Deputy Director, her commitment to alleviating trauma, suffering and poverty has remained steadfast. She is very excited to build upon the strong foundation of Share as a champion for professional staff development, with a clear commitment to equity, diversity and inclusion, and a passion for the mission.

A brief message from Amy is below:

"I believe that everyone should have a place to call home. Home is the foundation for family and community. A safe, stable place to live is necessary for people to not just survive but to thrive. Share has done incredible work in the community for the past 45 years and with so many people living outside and experiencing food insecurity there is clearly much more work to do.

"As an agency we need to grow our DEI work and be willing to be humbled along the way. We need to strengthen our infrastructure to ensure that team leaders have the support that they need to lead in this new world. We need to recognize that cultivating a more diverse staff and valuing lived experience means that policies and practices need to be reflective of these beliefs. It is for these reasons that I am excited to step into the role as Share's next Executive Director, to lead Share to an even more impactful future."

Please join us in congratulating Amy!
